You : Mr. Ishikawa, what would you like to drink?

Ishikawa: Hmm. Then, I'll have some oolong tea, please.

You : Oh, you're not drinking today?

Ishikawa: Actually, I do like drinking, but my doctor told me that drinking too much isn't good for me...

I've been trying not to drink much lately.

You : Oh, really? You should probably be careful about that.

[43-2]

Ishikawa: There are other things I'm careful about, too.

You : Oh, really? What kind of things?

Ishikawa: Well, I like salty foods, but I try not to eat too much of them.

I usually buy my lunch at a convenience store, but I try to choose items that are low in sodium.

You : Oh, that's important.

Ishikawa: Also, I exercise.

Every morning, I get off the train one stop before the station nearest my office and walk for about 20 minutes.

Other than that, I started jogging. I go for a run for about an hour after work.

You : That sounds great. Maybe I'll give it a try, too.

- You : Ms. Ito, I'm having a hard time remembering the names of the dishes. Is there a good way to learn them?
- Ito : It was tough for me at first, too. I took photos of the food with my smartphone and looked at them over and over again at home.
- You : Photos! That's a great idea.
- Ito : Also, while I was working, I made a point of double-checking the names of the dishes over and over again.
- You : Great idea. I'll give it a try starting tomorrow!

[49-2]

- You : Ms. Ito, may I ask you one more thing?
- Ito : Yes, what is it?
- You : A little while ago, a customer said, "The food is taking too long!" And then I got scolded...
- Ito : Oh, that must have been tough.
- You : Yes. It came out of the blue... and I couldn't explain why.
- Ito : It really takes you by surprise, doesn't it? But in situations like that, the best thing to do is to start by saying, "I'm sorry to have kept you waiting," before explaining why. You: I see.
- Ito : Yes. After that, please report it to the store manager right away.
